Profile Notes

You are a seasoned professional with a background in accounting and currency trading, which has equipped you with a solid understanding of financial matters. Your recent divorce has prompted you to seek expert financial advice to navigate the complexities of your pension sharing order and retirement planning.

Your personal life is characterised by your commitment to your family and your partner, Tony, with whom you share a household but maintain separate financial arrangements. Your two daughters, aged 30 and 29, are integral to your estate planning, as you intend to appoint them as your power of attorneys.

Your health is a priority for you, and you have made significant strides in improving it, including losing three stones and effectively managing your type 2 diabetes. Your lifestyle choices, such as never smoking, further contribute to your overall well-being.

Update 2026 July

Melanie has now stopped working through self employment, she was getting frustrated through work and with disagreements with her boss she decided to cut ties with it all. She will look to return to part time work in the new year as she has some holidays already booked in for August & September. She will look for another job towards the end of the year and hopefully start part time in the new year with a forecasted wage of £25,000.

Asset & Liability Notes

Client has a mortgage and CC & Personal Loan.

Her objective is to pay off the CC and personal loan to improve her overall position in the lead up to retirement. This will significantly reduce her monthly expenses too by circa £475. Improving her overall budgeting position.

She is expecting a future inheritance from the sale of property from her mother. This is to be split between her and her sister and is forecasted at £150,000. She is having a legal battle for this with her father in law and he is unfortunately not moving out of the property which is delaying the sale of her ownership. She is currently in legal battles for this and taking on fees associated. All being well it should be dealt with in the next couple of years.

Budget Notes

Melanie overall expenses are in the region of £2,800, this is accounting for all expenses such as holidays etc.

She has stopped working and therefore lost employment income, she has stated that she would like to replace with income from the pension of £1,900 per month. With the additional partner contribution of £800 towards bills this will put her very close to overall expenditure for the month with a slight reduction in luxuries, allowing her to live comfortably.

She is also wanting to withdraw a tax free cash lump sum of £40,000. £20,000 to replace emergency funds and also to cover some legal fees for the ongoing issue she has regarding the inheritance. The other £20,000 is to be used to pay off the personal loan and CC liabilities. Following the settle of these liabilities, she will greatly reduce her monthly outgoings by circa £480. Creating more disposable income.

Currently living off savings which is now reduced to £7,000 and this also acts as an emergency pot. She prefers to have 12 months of expenditure as an emergency reserve so close to £24,000. The £7,000 will likely be down to circa £4,000 by the time the pension income is set up and this is making her feel uncomfortable.

When she looks for another part time role at the start of 2027, she estimates the income from this to be minimum £20,000 per annum, but time will tell. The monthly income from the pension to be recommended will be assessed each month from affordability and tailored moving forward.

Cash reserves will be replenished through TFC and barrister fees covered for the foreseeable future.

She confirmed in our discussion that at most she has earned £4,000 this tax year so future pension income should be within her personal allowance until the start of the new tax year.

Currently invested at RP7 out of 10. Happy to continue with this. Assess recently for the advice conducted on consolidation and PSO.

She is an accountant by trade and has a good understanding of monitoring finances from this. She understands her time horizon and prefers being invested with the opportunity for capital growth with the view to use the pension as a dip and dip out pot of capital.

She has a future inheritance of £150,000 and this will settle remainder of her mortgage liability, meaning she will go into retirement with no debts.

Current pension value is circa £300,000 and with the view to return to part time work in the near future the reliance on the pension will drop as the immediate need at present will temporary.

Based on the above her capacity for loss is medium to high, however i feel this is leaning more to medium as if the withdrawals continue at the projected rate of £1,900 per month this will reduce longevity. Once her state pension kicks in at age 67, half of her retirement expenditure will be covered by this leaving the requirement of circa £12,000 per annum which will improve longevity and her overall capacity for loss.
