PENSION PROJECTION (REAL)

Plan Type: Personal Pension Plan

Illustration of possible future benefits

Plan holder: Mrs Angela Jayne Stead

Plan number: 500223804C 008-015

Illustration date: 19 June 2026

The following figures show what the pension might be at age 65. If your plan is invested in fund(s) with a guaranteed minimum growth rate, the assumed yearly rates of return shown below will not be less than the guaranteed rate.

Assumed yearly rates of return.	-0.49%	2.45%	5.39%
Projected pension fund value
Personal (non-protected) rights	£93,900.00	£97,800.00	£101,000.00
This could provide a pension of:
Personal (non-protected) rights	£5,520.00	£7,030.00	£8,730.00
A tax free lump sum of:	£23,400.00	£24,400.00	£25,400.00
Plus a pension of:
Personal (non-protected) rights	£4,140.00	£5,270.00	£6,550.00

The pension will be payable as follows:

For personal (non-protected) rights:

- Single Life, Monthly in advance for a minimum period of 5 years, no escalation.

In order to produce this illustration, we have used a number of assumptions and options chosen by you, many of which are set by the relevant guidance or legislation. These assumptions and options include:

- An assumed retirement date of 16 October 2027 at the age of 65.

Additionally, for personal (non-protected) rights:

- no further contributions will be paid.

The illustration shows the amount of pension that might be payable at the assumed retirement date, its purpose is to give you an idea of how much the pension might be worth and is not a promise or guarantee - the figures are not minimum or maximum amounts.

Important notes about projections - please read

The industry regulator, the Financial Conduct Authority (FCA), sets standard rates of investment return for use in projections. We have used these standard rates as we believe they represent a reasonable assumption of the possible future rates of investment returns on our funds. Actual returns might be lower or higher than those shown. Therefore, the figures shown are only examples of what you might get, assuming the rates of return shown, and are not guaranteed.

The projections include an allowance for our expenses and charges at the rates we currently use, but these may change in the future.

The actual amount of income at retirement depends on a number of factors, including:

- when the regular income payments commence
 - the actual contributions made
 - the actual performance of the investments
 - the cost of buying a pension at the time
- the tax rules applicable when the benefits are taken
 - your individual circumstances

The projected benefits and growth rates used in this illustration are shown in real terms ('today's prices'), this means that we have projected your benefits allowing for the possible effects of inflation. The rate that we have used to allow for inflation is 2.00% per year for the period to the assumed retirement date.

The illustration shows what would happen if your investment grows more slowly than the rate of inflation. As a result, the purchasing power of your plan would drop over time and we use a negative growth rate in real term projections to highlight this.

Inflation will reduce the purchasing power of your pension over time, for example, £1,000 ten years from now will buy you less than £1,000 today. To help you plan for your retirement, the projected benefits are those which might be payable when you retire, in today's prices.

When you take your pension benefits you will have a number of options to take your income in different ways. You will also have the option to use your pension fund to buy an income from another pension provider (known as the Open Market Option).

What actually happens in the future could be very different from the assumptions we have used, so you should consider getting further information or advice before you review these pension arrangements.

It is important that you regularly review your current investment choices along with those available from your pension to ensure they continue to meet your needs.

Pension legislation states that the tax free lump sum payable from your policy is usually limited to a maximum of 25% of your pension fund.

Please note, that lump sum benefits which exceed the tax-free lump sum allowances set by the Government will be subject to income tax charges.

The pension figures quoted are before the deduction of any income tax that may be due once you start taking your pension.

Your pension income will depend on how your investment grows and on interest rates at the time you retire.

Due to a change in the law, the pension figure(s) shown above may differ significantly from those seen in previous years. From 21 December 2012 onwards, the rates used to convert pension funds into retirement income must be the same for men and women, rather than be based on gender. You may see this requirement referred to as "gender neutral pricing".

On average women live longer than men, so men are likely to see a reduction in their illustrated income. Conversely, women may see an increase in their illustrated income. Further information on gender neutral pricing can be found on our website.
